

Statistics for the SDGs - global indicators

Goal of Clear Water and Sanitation Farget 6.6 By 2030, protect and restore water-related ecosystems, including mountains, forests wetlands, rivers, aquifers and lakes Definition The indicator specifies surface area (in hectares) beeing on the List of Wetlands of International Importancea according the Ramsar Convention in the given year. International Importancea according the Ramsar Convention in the given year. The Convention on Wetlands of International Importance especially as Waterfowl Habitat, called the Ramsar Convention was signed in Ramsar on 2 February, 1971. Un now, it has been ratified by 168 countries which assigned 2186 wetlands of international importance, among which are 13 Polish sites. Poland acceded to the convention on 22 march 1978 The convention's mission is the conservation and wise use of all wetlands through local and national actions and international cooperation, as a contribution towards achieving sustainable development accross the world. According to the Ramsar Convention wetlands are "areas of marsh, fen, peatland or water, whether natural or artificial, permanent or temporary, with water that is static or flowing, fresh, brackish or salt, including areas of marine water the depth of which at low tide does not exceed six metres." The Ramsar Contracting Parties, including Poland, have committed themselves to designate suitable wetlands for the List of Wetlands of International Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national land-use planning, appropriate policies and legislation, management actions, and public education and to cooperate internationally in the implementation of the convention. There are 13 Ramsar Sites on the List of Wetlands of International Importance, in Poland: Biebrzanaki National Park (59 233 ha, since 1995) Wigny National Park (9764 ha, since 2002) Nigny National Park (9764 ha, since 2002) Nariew River Mouth National Park (8074 ha, since 1995) Watra River Mouth National Park (8074 ha, since 1995) Watra River Mouth	Name of the indicator	6.6.1 Change in the extent of water-related ecosystems over time
Definition The indicator specifies surface area (in hectares) beeing on the List of Wetlands of International Importancea according the Ramsar Convention in the given year. July hectares [ha] Available dimensions The Convention on Wetlands of International Importance especially as Waterfowl Habitat, called the Ramsar Convention was signed in Ramsar on 2 February, 1971, Unt now, it has been ratified by 168 countries which assigned 2186 wetlands of international importance, among which are 13 Polish sites. Poland acceded to the convention on 22 march 1978 The convention's mission is the conservation and wise use of all wetlands through local and national actions and international cooperation, as a contribution towards achieving sustainable development accross the world. According to the Ramsar Convention wetlands are "areas of marsh, fen, peatland or water, whether natural or artificial, permanent or temporary, with water that is static or flowing, fresh, brackish or salt, including areas of marine water the depth of which at low tide does not exceed six metres". The Ramsar Contracting Parties, including Poland, have committed themselves to designate suitable wetlands for the List of Wetlands of International Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national land-use planning, appropriate policies and legislation, management actions, and public education and to cooperate internationally in the implementation of the convention. There are 13 Ramsar Sites on the List of Wetlands of International Importance, in Poland: Biebrzanaki National Park (59 233 ha, since 1995) Wigny National Park (15 085 ha, since 2002) Nigry National Park (97 64 ha, since 2002) Narew River National Park (7 350 ha, since 2002) Narew River National Park (8 074 ha, since 1984) Druzno Lake Nature Reserve (8 053 ka, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (8 054 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (8 089 ha, since 1984) Karas Lake Nature Reserve (8 089 ha, since 1984) Subalpine peatbogs in K	Sustainable Development Goal	Goal 6. Clear water and sanitation
International Importancea according the Ramsar Convention in the given year. International Importance appears total total The Convention on Wetlands of International Importance especially as Waterfowl Habitat, called the Ramsar Convention was signed in Ramsar on 2 February, 1971. Unt now, it has been ratified by 168 countries which assigned 2186 wetlands of international importance, among which are 13 Polish sites. Poland acceded to the convention on 22 march 1978 The convention's mission is the conservation and wise use of all wetlands through local and national actions and international cooperation, as a contribution towards achieving sustainable development accross the world. According to the Ramsar Convention wetlands are "areas of marsh, fen, peatland or water, whether natural or artificial, permanent or temporary, with water that is static or flowing, fresh, brackish or salt, including areas of marine water the depth of which at low tide does not exceed six metres". The Ramsar Contracting Parties, including Poland, have committed themselves to designate suitable wetlands for the List of Wetlands of International Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national land-tained, explanning, appropriate policies and legislation, management actions, and public education and to cooperate internationally in the implementation of the convention. There are 13 Ramsar Sites on the List of Wetlands of International Importance, in Poland: Biebrzanaki National Park (59 233 ha, since 1995) Wigny National Park (7 356 ha, since 1995) Biegrzanaki National Park (8 0744 ha, since 1995) Ward River Mouth National Park (8 0744 ha, since 1995) Warta River Mouth National Park (8 074 ha, since 2002) Alake of Seven Islands Nature Reserve (1 618 ha, since 1994) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (819 ha, since 1977) Swidwie Lake Nature Reserve (816 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (816 ha, since 1984) Karas Lake Nature Reserve (816 ha, since 1984) Karas Lake Nature Reserve (816 ha,	Target	6.6 By 2030, protect and restore water-related ecosystems, including mountains, forests, wetlands, rivers, aquifers and lakes
The Convention on Wetlands of International Importance especially as Waterfowl Habitat, called the Ramsar Convention was signed in Ramsar on 2 February, 1971. Unt now, it has been ratified by 168 countries which assigned 2186 wetlands of international importance, among which are 13 Polish sites. Poland acceded to the convention on 22 march 1978 The convention's mission is the conservation and wise use of all wetlands through local and national actions and international cooperation, as a contribution towards achieving sustainable development accross the world. According to the Ramsar Convention wetlands are "areas of marsh, fen, peatland or water, whether natural or artificial, permanent or temporary, with water that is static or flowing, fresh, brackish or salt, including areas of marine water the depth of which at low tide does not exceed six metres". The Ramsar Contracting Parties, including Poland, have committed themselves to designate suitable wetlands for the List of Wetlands of International Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national land-use planning, appropriate policies and legislation, management actions, and public education and to cooperate internationally in the implementation of the convention. There are 13 Ramsar Sites on the List of Wetlands of International Importance, in Poland: Biebrzanaki National Park (59 233 ha, since 1995) Wigny National Park (15 085 ha, since 2002) Poleski National Park (15 085 ha, since 2002) Narew River National Park (17 350 ha, since 2002) Milicz Fishponds Nature Reserve (3 088 ha, since 1995) Warta River Mouth National Park (8 074 ha, since 1995) Warta River Mouth National Park (8 074 ha, since 1995) Lake of Seven Islands Nature Reserve (1 189 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (3 18 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (815 ha, since 1984) Sublaptine peatbogs in Karkonosze Mountains (40 ha, since 2002) The General Directorate for Environmental Protection	Definition	The indicator specifies surface area (in hectares) beeing on the List of Wetlands of International Importancea according the Ramsar Convention in the given year.
The Convention on Wetlands of International Importance especially as Waterfowl Habitat, called the Ramsar Convention was signed in Ramsar on 2 February, 1971. Unt now, it has been ratified by 168 countries which assigned 2186 wetlands of international importance, among which are 13 Polish sites. Poland acceded to the convention on 22 march 1978 The convention's mission is the conservation and wise use of all wetlands through local and national actions and international cooperation, as a contribution towards achieving sustainable development accross the world. According to the Ramsar Convention wetlands are "areas of marsh, fen, peatland or water, whether natural or artificial, permanent or temporary, with water that is static or flowing, fresh, brackish or salt, including areas of marine water the depth of which at low tide does not exceed six metres". The Ramsar Contracting Parties, including Poland, have committed themselves to designate suitable wetlands for the List of Wetlands of International Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national land-use planning, appropriate policies and legislation, management actions, and public education and to cooperate internationally in the implementation of the convention. There are 13 Ramsar Sites on the List of Wetlands of International Importance, in Poland: Biebrzanaki National Park (32 744 ha, since 1995) Slowinski National Park (69 233 ha, since 2002) Poleski National Park (7 350 ha, since 2002) Narew River National Park (7 350 ha, since 2002) Milicz Fishponds Nature Reserve (5 324 ha, since 1995) Warta River Mouth National Park (6 750 ha, since 2002) Lake of Seven Islands Nature Reserve (1 18 ha, since 1984) Druzno Lake Nature Reserve (18 18 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (18 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (815 ha, since 1984) Subalpine peablogs in Karkonosze Mountains (40 ha, since 2002) The General Directorate for Environmental Protection	Unit	hectares [ha]
Habitat, called the Ramsar Convention was signed in Ramsar on 2 February, 1971. Unt now, it has been ratified by 168 countries which assigned 2186 wetlands of international importance, among which are 13 Polish sites. Poland acceded to the convention on 22 march 1978 The convention's mission is the conservation and wise use of all wetlands through local and national actions and international cooperation, as a contribution towards achieving sustainable development accross the world. According to the Ramsar Convention wetlands are "areas of marsh, fen, peatland or water, whether natural or artificial, permanent or temporary, with water that is static or flowing, fresh, brackish or salt, including areas of marine water the depth of which at low tide does not exceed six metres". The Ramsar Contracting Parties, including Poland, have committed themselves to designate suitable wetlands for the List of Wetlands of International Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national Importance, in Poland: Wethodological explanations Wethodological properation of the convention. There are 13 Ramsar Sites on the List of Wetlands of International Importance, in Poland: Biebrzanaki National Park (59 233 ha, since 1995) Biebrzanaki National Park (69 233 ha, since 1995) Wigny National Park (76 404 ha, since 2002) Narew River National Park (76 404 ha, since 2002) Narew River National Park (76 404 ha, since 1995) Warta River Mouth National Park (80 74 ha, since 1994) Druzno Lake Nature Reserve (8 10 84 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (8 1189 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (8 1189 ha, since 1984) Karas Lake Nature Reserve (815 ha, since 1984) Subalpine peatbogs in Karkonosze Mountains (40 ha, since 2002) The General Directorate for Environmental Protection Annual data since 2010.	Available dimensions	total
Data availability Annual data since 2010. Notes	Methodological explanations	Habitat, called the Ramsar Convention was signed in Ramsar on 2 February, 1971. Until now, it has been ratified by 168 countries which assigned 2186 wetlands of international importance, among which are 13 Polish sites. Poland acceded to the convention on 22 march 1978 The convention's mission is the conservation and wise use of all wetlands through local and national actions and international cooperation, as a contribution towards achieving sustainable development accross the world. According to the Ramsar Convention wetlands are "areas of marsh, fen, peatland or water, whether natural or artificial, permanent or temporary, with water that is static or flowing, fresh, brackish or salt, including areas of marine water the depth of which at low tide does not exceed six metres". The Ramsar Contracting Parties, including Poland, have committed themselves to designate suitable wetlands for the List of Wetlands of International Importance, work towards the wise use of all their wetlands through national land-use planning, appropriate policies and legislation, management actions, and public education and to cooperate internationally in the implementation of the convention. There are 13 Ramsar Sites on the List of Wetlands of International Importance, in Poland: Biebrzanaki National Park (59 233 ha, since 1995) Wigry National Park (15 085 ha, since 2002) Narew River National Park (7 764 ha, since 2002) Narew River National Park (7 350 ha, since 2002) Milicz Fishponds Nature Reserve (5 324 ha, since 1995) Warta River Mouth National Park (8 074 ha, since 1995) Warta River Mouth National Park (8 074 ha, since 1984) Druzno Lake Nature Reserve (1 189 ha, since 1984) Luknajno Lake Nature Reserve (1 189 ha, since 1984) Karas Lake Nature Reserve (815 ha, since 1984)
Notes	Data source	The General Directorate for Environmental Protection
	Data availability	Annual data since 2010.
Data updated on 24-04-2023	Notes
	Data updated on	24-04-2023

Statistics for the SDGs - global indicators

Metadata updated on 19-12-2019